If you are already an existent user of CutMaster 2D Professional, you can also use the program as a file which you will install on your computer rather than a full software. But to apply this feature, first you have to register your serial number on the official website.

Q: Is there a way to prevent css from overriding default preprocessor? I've created a grid which is causing some problems. If I set float:left on the 2nd row. It gets applied to the entire grid. Here's the code: #grid { background:black; } .item { float:left; margin: 1px; width: 300px; height: 200px; border: 1px solid white; } .red { background-color:red; } .green { background-color: green; } .yellow { background-color: yellow; } I'll very much appreciate any assistance. Thanks in advance!

A: It is not possible. The CSS pre-processor does not look at the

HTML when it evaluates the CSS file. In addition, it ignores the start and end tags, unless they are used to define a style. Source: [Rabies after natural bites of wild animals in the Czech Republic, 1997-2001]. During the years 1997-2001 there were 125 animal attacks with a clinical picture of rabies-exposure in the Czech Republic. Eighteen (14.4%) patients were already diagnosed with rabies. The majority of the patients were bitten by foxes (56% of the cases) and most often (73%) were exposed to an adult animal.

The interval between exposure and start of immunotherapy was on average 4 days (standard deviation--SD 3.5). In general the rabies diagnosis was made on the basis of clinical and laboratory findings (interleukin-2, rabies virus antigen, and/or specific antibodies) and the molecular-genetic confirmation was obtained on the basis of the amplification of
